WYT2608HF Christian Healing:
From Early Church to Alternative Therapies

SYLLABUS

INSTRUCTOR: Dr. David A. Reed, Professor Emeritus of Pastoral Theology and Research Professor

WELCOME

Welcome to this course on “Christian Healing: From Early Church to Alternative Therapies.” It is listed here as a theology course but may be taken in history or pastoral as well. I hope you find the learning experience of working online to be both enjoyable and worthwhile. I look forward to sharing this course with you.

PERSONAL INTRODUCTION

I was introduced to Christian healing as a child, having been reared in the Pentecostal tradition in New Brunswick. After a brief teaching career at New Brunswick Institute of Technology, at age 26 my wife and I became Episcopalians while studying in Rhode Island. Following ordination, I pastored for 18 years in Massachusetts and Connecticut. In 1987 I joined the faculty of Wycliffe College in Pastoral Theology and as Director of Field Education.

Somewhat to my own surprise, my doctoral work on a Pentecostal topic has led to a continuing and broader involvement in Pentecostal-charismatic studies. That in part explains my personal interest in this course, as well as the reason why I give the Pentecostal-charismatic movement more attention within what is surely a much broader and equally worthy topic of healing. I would only add that the global Pentecostal-charismatic phenomenon has been in our time a major factor in the openness to, as well as skepticism of, the viability of spiritual or “divine” healing in the church today.

DESCRIPTION

This is a survey course combining historical and theological-praxis themes. Though there is a concentration on the 19th and 20th centuries, we will begin much earlier. As a course in Christian healing, we first locate healing within its biblical framework, particularly the ministry of Jesus and the early church. We then catch a glimpse of specific practices and trends in the church’s history that help us understand the place of healing in our own time.

We then turn to the theological and practical expressions of Christian healing in the church. Particular attention will be given to the 19th century, the Pentecostal and later charismatic healing movements, the practice of healing—including sacramental and liturgical approaches— in mainline churches, and the challenge of recent alternative therapies.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

1. the healing ministry of Jesus and the early church, and the theological perspective that attended them;
2. certain healing practices in the history of the church, especially the use of relics in the early Catholic period and the Protestant Puritan spiritual practices, the waning of healing in the wake of the Enlightenment, and its revival in the 19th century;
3. the theology and practice of healing in Pentecostalism, as well as its formative roots in the 19th century Holiness movement;
4. the various trajectories of the mid-century healing evangelists, healing in the charismatic movement, inner healing, signs and wonders, and deliverance ministry;
5. the relationship of Christian healing to the emerging new alternative therapies.
